

Contents

Prologue	vii
Acknowledgements	xi
Translator's Note	xiii
PART 1 Taste, Modernity, Centre and Periphery	1
Gourmet Physiology, or the Bourgeois Sorcery of Shapes	3
Food for the Body, Fasting for the Soul	27
Barthes: From the Semiology of Wine to the Empire of the Senses	43
PART 2 Taste, Modernity and Centre I
Bordeaux: The Human Condition as Purple Venality	47
Montaigne: The Botrytis and Château d'Yquem	49
Kierkegaard: A Philosophical Diet-et(h)ics and the Truthful Wine of Bordeaux	55
PART 3 Taste, Modernity and Centre II
Modernity and its Artificial Paradises	63
Brillat-Savarin, Baudelaire, Marx and Benjamin: From the Order of the Table and its Stimulants to the Disorder of the Drunken Barricades	65

Hemingway, or the Alcoholic Outpourings of Valpolicella	81
Monogamous Joyce and his Fendant de Sion Wine	87
Svevo, the Unconscious and the Generous Wine of Istria	97
Schwob, Stevenson and the Imaginary History of the Wines of Samos and Bourgogne	105
PART 4 Taste, Modernity and Periphery
Argentina: A Corpus of Wine and Food	115
Sarmiento, the Fermentation of the Country and the Preservation of Wine	117
Aldao: Servile Monk and Drinker	133
Mansilla, or Vernacular Sybaritism	141
Payró the Rogue: From the Counterfeiter of Carlón Wine to the Beaujolais of Villefranche	165
The Shadow of Martínez Estrada and his Alimentary Radiography	173
Marie Langer, or the Child as a Peronist Snack	207
Index	223