

Contents

Introduction	VII
Introduction for English Edition	IX
Publishers' Preface.....	XII
Chapter I. Family, Childhood and Youth.....	14
The Cornerstones of Personality	14
Family	14
Older Roots	20
Childhood.....	27
War.....	32
Chapter II. In Search of and Finding his Path	34
The Institute of Labor	34
Bernstein and Ukhtomsky	44
Movements as a Key to Understanding the Principles of Brain Functioning	51
Bernstein and Vygotsky	54
Expanding the Scope of Research.....	60
Science and Leisure	73
Chapter III. Bernstein and Pavlov	82
The First Meeting.....	82
The Outcomes of Bernstein's Early Creative Period	85
Starting Line.....	106
Chapter IV. Construction of Movements	113
War Years (1941–1945).....	113
"Dexterity"	116
Difficulties in Movement Control.....	123
The Sensory Corrections Principle	127
Levels of Movement Construction.....	133
The Outcomes of Bernstein's Second Creative Period	142
Chapter V. Physiology of Activity	145
The Stifling Atmosphere.....	145

Physiology on Trial.....	147
The First Words of the Newborn Physiology of Activity.....	151
Physiology of Activity Gains Strength	159
Contacts with Mathematicians.....	170
Development of Bernstein's Idea of the Model of the Future.....	174
Afterword	181
After Afterword.....	185
Appendix	188
Selected papers of N. A. Bernstein	191
The Main Methodological Principles of the Physiology of Movement (1949).....	193
New Lines of Developments in Contemporary Physiology (1962).....	216
From the Preface to A. V. Napalkov and N. A. Chichvarina's Brochure "Brain and Cybernetics" (1963).....	225
Remarks on K. E. Tsiolkovsky's essay "Mechanics in Biology" (1964)	230
A Few Words on Writing and Handwriting (1966)	236
From Reflexes to the Model of the Future (1966)	249