

Contents

Introduction	7
1. What is Religious Studies and Religion	9
1.1 What Do Religious Studies Deal With? What Is Religion?	9
1.2 Why Study Religion?	12
1.3 Who and How Do We Observe Religion?	13
2. Methodological Approaches to the Study of Religion	17
2.1 Theological Approach	17
2.2 Philosophical Approach	19
2.3 Religious Approaches	21
3. The Inside Perspective versus the Outside Perspective	27
3.1 Information versus Experience	27
3.2 Participant and Observer	29
3.3 The Experiences of Others and Claims to Veracity	31
4. Theories about the Origin and Development of Religions	35
4.1 Motifs of Interest in the Origin of Religion	35
4.2 Older Evolutional Theories	36
4.3 The Latest Approaches	38
5. Comparative Religious Studies	43
5.1 The Role of Comparison	43
5.2 Aspects, Levels, and Types of Comparison	45

6.	Sociology of Religion	49
6.1	Formation of the Sociology of Religion	49
6.2	Peter Ludwig Berger – Dialectical Understanding of the Relation between Man and Society	52
6.3	Contemporary Trends	55
7.	Psychology of Religion	59
7.1	The Beginnings of the Psychology of Religion; William James	59
7.2	Sigmund Freud and Carl Gustav Jung	61
7.3	Examples of Psychological Approaches	65
8.	The Cognitive Approach to Religion	71
8.1	What Is the Cognitive Approach?	71
8.2	Religious Experience and Ritual	73
8.3	The Role of Emotions in Religion in Terms of Cognitive Approach	74
9.	Hermeneutic Religious Studies	77
9.1	Deeper Understanding	77
9.2	Notable Figures in the History of Hermeneutics	79
9.3	Other Aspects of Hermeneutics and Their Application to Religion	82
10.	Phenomenology of Religion	85
10.1	Attentive Perception Instead of Deduction	85
10.2	Representatives of the Phenomenology of Religion	87
10.3	Cryptomorphous Religious Phenomena	90
11.	New Religiosity	93
11.1	New Religiosity – a Challenge to Contemporary Society ...	93
11.2	Causes and Signs	95
12.	Religion in the Contemporary World	101
12.1	Religion and Politics	101
12.2	Religion and Economics	103
12.3	Religion and Science	107
	Bibliography	111