

Table of Content

- 7 Abstract
- 9 Introduction
- 11 Summary

I. God, the River and the Engineer

- 18 A hydrological and ethnological Big Bang?
- 22 The Flood, local flood turned global myth?
- 23 First accounts of a Flood
- 28 The ultimate weapon
- 32 The End and the Origin
- 35 From myth to phenomenon
- 41 From angry Gods to heroic saviours
- 47 Pre-industrial floodplains
  - 47 Early adaptive landscapes
  - 50 Living with the flow
  - 54 Flood as land-maker
  - 58 Reinventing flexible landscape
- 61 Dreams and achievements of the Great Reclamation works
  - 61 A European self-colonization
  - 69 From river space to border river
  - 71 From common good to real estate
  - 74 Tame or set free: nature and the Enlightenment
  - 76 Rewriting history: the negation of pre-industrial economies and the apology of technology
  - 79 The pro and cons of containment
- 85 After the Correction
  - 85 Correcting the correction: illusion of progress and never-ending adjustment
  - 88 Environmental groups and the engineered landscape
  - 91 The rehabilitation of the river shore and floodplain

II. New European floodscapes

- 99 Climate change expectations and narratives
  - 99 A young idea for an old process
  - 105 Man as master of climate
  - 108 Panic and circumspection
- 113 Framing a new flood management policy
- 119 Room for the River: reversible landscapes in the Rhine-Meuse Delta
  - 122 The Biesbosch, from land to water to land
  - 122 First regulation and first mitigation project
  - 126 The delta enclosed: nearly the end of the Biesbosch?
  - 132 From policy to proposal: Opening the scope of possible measures
  - 136 The project as tool of involvement
  - 138 Embedding spatial quality into flood prevention
  - 140 Flooding the Biesbosch (again)
  - 142 Noordwaard gradual landscape
  - 151 Controlled disaster in the Overdiepse polder
- 161 Meerstad: Flood as investment
  - 163 From Woldmeer to Meerstad
  - 166 Landscape economics
  - 168 From program to plan
  - 172 Red for blue and blue for red
  - 173 Beyond the housing crisis: Meerstad without Stad

179	Elastic landscape for the Isère Valley
180	1870-1914: the Isère channeled “for good”
181	The 1929 Schneider plan: a manual for flood mitigation
183	Correcting the second correction
184	The Isère Amont project
186	From scenarios to consensus
191	Metropolitan river: a missed opportunity ?
197	Isar Plan: the wild, the urban and the “true Alpine river”
197	The Isar Plan
201	From water machine to ecological corridor: First renaturation proposals
209	“Something to discuss about”: design as a starting point
210	Controlled flooding as vaccine against disastrous floods
215	The Third Rhône Correction as Gesamtkunstwerk ?
215	The Rhône river, from landscape to infrastructure
224	Renaturation ambitions along Swiss rivers: a U-turn in federal policy
226	Flood as agent of landscape architecture: from river channel to river space
228	Loosening the Upper Rhône, from policy to project
231	2000: the wake-up call
235	Landscape, at last
238	Sion-sur-Rhône: landscape studio as agent provocateur

III. Comparisons and conclusions: Designing flood-ready landscapes

247	Setting goals and communicating concepts
247	Correction - coercion?
248	Negotiating Room for the River
251	Landscape New Deals
251	The necessity of fear
255	Risk transfers
261	Farmers vs. beavers: Legitimacy conflicts in land-use adaptation
263	Combined ambitions for multifunctional landscapes: Are floodscapes lost spaces?
268	Space for flood, space for landscape?
271	Redefining riverine aesthetics
271	The fluctuating role of landscape architects
273	The need for images and visions
274	Setting aesthetic values
282	Floodscapes as reality check
285	Epilogue

Appendix

289	From watercolors to point clouds: floodscapes design tools
290	Shifting scales
291	Synchronization: Historical maps and future visions
292	Landscape morphology as risk map
293	Revealing micro-topography
294	Sketching scenarios
295	Quantifying options

Bibliography

299	Part I
303	Part II
310	Part III
312	Interviews
313	Data and statistical sources
314	Previous publications