

BILLS, BONDS AND EXPORT CREDIT AGENCIES: CONTINUITIES AND DISCONTINUITIES IN THE MANAGEMENT OF THE FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEM OF EXCHANGE IN THE LONDON FINANCIAL MARKET IN THE FIRST HALF OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

Table of Contents

Introduction	2
Coordinating Lifeboats	2
Calling in the Reserves: Export Credit Agencies to the Rescue	3
Trouble in Paradise	5
Export Credit Agencies: Where the Wild Things Are	6
Tracing the Origins of Export Credit Agencies	8
An Old, New Approach: An Ecological Perspective	17
Limiting Complexity	23
Overview	29
Bibliography	32
Appendices	39
Chapter 1 Situating the British Export Credit Agency	50
Interwar Years: The Making of a Looming Catastrophe	50
Following the Money	61
Foreign Exchange and the Intricacies of International Capital Flows	77
The Making and Unmaking of Sovereign Debt	94
International Development	114
Institutions in Times of New Institutionalism	130
Conclusion: sub specie aeternitatis	161
Bibliography	164
Chapter 2 "Those Wretched Little Piece of Papers:" Bills of Exchange in Transition (1870-1914)	201
Making Sense of Bills of Exchange: Three Approaches and Rising Challenges	203
The Internationalisation of the London bill: Crafting an English Institutional Complex of Credit	214
Beliefs and Norms: Crafting of a Credit Game	216
Organisations and Rules: Imperfect Design Making and the Importance of Junctures	227
Parametric Changes: Bank Note Convertibility, The Privilege of Banking and the Development of Credit-based Safe Assets	239
Bank Note Convertibility	240

The Privilege of Banking	243
Development of Credit-based Safe Assets	249
A Functioning Domestic Institutional Complex of Credit under International Attention	252
Sieging the British Institutional Complex of Credit: The Role of Private Order Arrangements	256
A Second Wave of Cordial Entente: Attempting a State Order Arrangement	270
Ring-fencing the Bill on London	288
Conclusion	298
Bibliography	301
Appendices	318
Chapter 3 Restructuring the London Capital Market: The London Foreign Exchange Market and the Export Credit Guarantee Department	334
Beyond Market Failures: Embracing Institutional Change	338
Readjusting the Parameters of the British Institutional Complex of Credit: Nationalisation, Circulation and Joint-Stock Bank Amalgamation	342
Nationalising the Institutional Complex of Credit	342
Revisiting Circulation and Bank Notes	345
Crafting a New Role of the Joint-Stock Banks	346
Developing a Foreign Exchange Market in London: In Between Joint-Stock Banks and the Accepting Houses	353
Solving the Fundamental Problem of Exchange: The Case of the Export Credits Department	357
Conclusion	365
Bibliography	366
Appendices	369
General Conclusion	374
General Findings	374
Findings' Implications	376
Limitations and Future Areas of Research	377
Revisiting Policy Implications	377
Bibliography	379