

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	15
Introduction	17
An ethnographic entry to salsa	17
Why study salsa dancers? A personal journey	20
Framing the thesis.....	21
Thesis outline	23
A note on videos and photographs in this study	23

PART I

A THEORETICAL, METHODOLOGICAL AND EMPIRICAL INTRODUCTION TO THE SALSA CIRCUIT.....	25
-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----------

Chapter 1 Theoretical perspectives.....	27
1.1 From identity politics to local ethnographies: writing about salsa	28
1.1.1 Salsa as a music and dance complex	30
1.1.2 Local ethnographies of salsa dancing	38
1.1.3 The cultural politics of dance: the exoticisation of Latin dances	42
1.2 Researching circulation from a transnational perspective	46
1.2.1 Towards a transnational perspective	46
1.2.2 Movement on different scales: (im)mobilities, dance and affect	49
1.3 A constructivist understanding of social categories	52
1.3.1 Against “groupism”: a relational understanding of ethnicity, race and gender	52
1.3.2 “Authenticity”, ethnicity, gender and other categories in the salsa circuit	54
1.4 The salsa circuit: beyond a spatially-bound framework	56
1.4.1 Bridging theories of localised scenes and global flows: conceptualising the circuit.....	56
1.4.2 Art worlds and artistic fields	60
1.4.3 Bourdieu’s theorisation of capital in a transnational context	62
1.5 Research questions	65

Chapter 2 Methodology and methods	67
2.1 Constructing “the field”	68
2.1.1 Multi-sited research	69
2.1.2 Mapping the “field sites”, choosing the events	71
2.2 Dancing through the field: salsa ethnography	75
2.2.1 Participant observation/observant participation	76
2.2.2 Embodied research	79
2.2.3 Reflexivity and the politics of location	82
2.3 Conducting qualitative interviews	85
2.3.1 Semi-structured, problem-centred interviews	85
2.3.2 Sampling and interview participants	87
2.3.3 Challenges and ethics in interviewing salsa dancers	90
2.4 Analysing data	92
2.4.1 Codes and categories	92
2.4.2 Writing and interpreting data	94
Chapter 3 The salsa circuit: an empirical introduction	97
3.1 The formation of the (European) salsa circuit	97
3.1.1 Salsa studios and local salsa scenes	99
3.1.2 The commercialisation of salsa	101
3.2 Salsa hubs	103
3.2.1 Salsa congresses	103
3.2.2 The space of salsa tourism in Havana, a recently emerging salsa hub	108
3.3 Circulating people and imaginaries in an affective economy	114
3.3.1 From a hobby to an “addiction”: mobile salsa trajectories	116
3.3.2 The Esperanto of the body : salsa’s representation as a “global” language	125
3.4 Conclusion	133

PART II

NEGOTIATING ETHNICITY AND GENDER IN THE SALSA CIRCUIT135

Introduction to Part II: conceptual notes on conventions, ethnicity and gender 137 |

Chapter 4 Salsa’s “Latinness”: negotiating ethnicity and authenticity in salsa dancing and teaching 141 |

4.1 Non-Latin salsa dancers and the negotiations of salsa	142
4.1.1 “Anyone can learn about its roots and all that stuff”: undoing salsa’s “Latinness”	143
4.1.2 “Latinos teach badly”: boundary-making	146
4.2 Latin American salsa dancers and the negotiations of salsa	151
4.2.1 “In Europe I have to count exactly on eight beats”: learning the teaching convention	151
4.2.2 “Move your body! That’s the Cuban style!”: doing being Cuban	154
4.3 Expectations and negotiations of authenticity in salsa tourism in Havana	161
4.3.1 “My goal is to dance like a Cuban”: European students’ expectations	161
4.3.2 “For them it’s just a job”: negotiating the “authentic experience”	165
4.4 Conclusion	169

Chapter 5 Gendered bodies on the dance floor: doing, redoing and undoing gender in salsa dancing 171 |

5.1 Producing the convention of leading and following	173
5.1.1 “Guys and girls are the fundamental basis”: forming salsa partners	174
5.1.2 “Ladies, just follow his lead”: gendering leader and follower roles	178
5.2 Negotiating the gendered dance partnership	182
5.2.1 “A nice role play”: reinforcing the gendered categories	183
5.2.2 “You can switch the roles”: disentangling sex category from gender	186
5.2.3 “A conversation instead of a lecture”: undoing gender	190
5.2.4 “I don’t shake my hips all the time”: from ladies’/men’s styling to body movement	196
5.3 Conclusion	202

PART III
TRANSNATIONAL CAREERS OF SALSA DANCE PROFESSIONALS	205
Introduction to Part III: conceptual notes on transnational careers	207
Marcos: "Salsa is making me travel all over the world"	210
Yaimara: "Everybody here has got this energy"	214
Maria: "I caught the virus"	217
Chapter 6 Becoming a salsa dance professional	223
6.1 Professional identifications in the affective economy of the salsa circuit	223
6.1.1 "Then it truly became my life": salsa dancing as vocation	224
6.1.2 "You need to know how to sell yourself": salsa dancing as affective labour ..	229
6.2 Negotiating the salsa dance profession in Europe	235
6.2.1 "Salsa is not recognised yet": struggling for legitimacy outside the salsa circuit	236
6.2.2 "I was a squatter": salsa dance business as an economic strategy	240
6.3 Salsa dance professionals' income-generating activities	242
6.3.1 "You don't have a regular contract": travelling as salsa artist	243
6.3.2 "Either you are on the move or you manage a school": owning a dance studio	246
6.4 Conclusion	249
Chapter 7 Access to the European salsa circuit	251
7.1 Latin American salsa dance professionals and their imaginaries of a "cosmopolitan lifestyle"	254
7.1.1 "I knew that in Europe there was more salsa": imaginary travels	255
7.2 A Cuban case study	258
7.2.1 Juli: "They helped me a lot": mobilising friendship networks	259
7.2.2 Yaimara: "I found my media naranja ": mobilising family networks and transnational marriage	262
7.2.3 Juan: "I started touring in Italy with the Tropicana": mobilising cultural capital	265
7.2.4 Wilfredo: "Up to now I haven't had the opportunity to travel": teaching at the edge of the salsa circuit	267

7.3 Consolidating legal status	270
7.3.1 "I had to leave the country for a period of time": stuck in Europe	272
7.4 Conclusion	274
Chapter 8 Building up reputation	277
8.1 Social capital in the salsa circuit	278
8.1.1 "It doesn't matter how great you are, if you don't have the network": networking practices	279
8.1.2 "He opened up the door for me": organisers, promoters and dance students	281
8.1.3 "We performed together in a show": dance partners	284
8.1.4 "It's too much all over the place": mobility's implications	287
8.2 Salsa capital in the salsa circuit	290
8.2.1 "Off to... ?? I don't know, lol": mobility and salsa capital	291
8.2.2 "She looks exotic": bodies and salsa capital	294
8.2.3 "Girls are just 'the dancer of'": gender and salsa capital	297
8.2.4 "He was looking for a Cuban": ethnicity and salsa capital	302
8.3 Conclusion	304
Conclusion	307
Review of theoretical and methodological contributions	307
Key findings and contributions to the academic literature	310
Scope for future research	317
Appendix I Guideline semi-directed interviews	321
Appendix II Interview participants	325
Appendix III Pledge of honour	327
Literature	329