Abstract	v
Zusammenfassung	vii
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Motivation	3
1.2 Time-resolved high-harmonic spectroscopy: an introduction	4
1.3 Previous experiments	9
1.4 Conclusion	13
2 Experimental Setup	15
2.1 Introduction	17
2.2 Laser Sources	17
2.3 High-harmonic Spectroscopy Setup	18
2.4 Optical Setups	20
2.4.1 Setup for short deep UV pulses	20
2.4.2 Transient-grating setup	22
3 Theoretical description of the non-adiabatic dynamics and photodissociation of NO₂	27
3.1 Introduction	29
3.2 Method.	31
3.2.1 Calculation of potential-energy surfaces	31
3.2.2 Calculation of the vibronic wave packet	37
3.2.3 Calculation of photoelectron spectra	38
3.3 Results	43
3.3.1 Potential-energy surfaces	43
3.3.2 Vibronic wave packets	45
3.3.3 Photoelectron spectra	48
3.4 Comparison to Experimental Photoelectron Spectra	53
3.4.1 Experimental Setting and Data Treatment	53
3.4.2 Simulation of the Experiment	53
3.4.3 Comparison of the Experiment with the Simulation	54
3.5 Conclusion	58

4 Modeling of high-harmonic spectra	59
4.1 Introduction	61
4.2 Tunnel Ionization	63
4.3 Electron Propagation	69
4.4 Nuclear Dynamics during HHG	71
4.5 Electron Recombination	73
4.6 Conclusion	83
5 Impulsive alignment of 1,3-cyclohexadiene and benzene	85
5.1 Introduction	87
5.2 Experimental details	87
5.3 Theoretical Model	89
5.4 Results and Discussion	90
5.5 Conclusion and Outlook	95
6 Dissociation dynamics in CH₃I and CF₃I	97
6.1 Introduction	99
6.2 Method	100
6.2.1 Experimental details	100
6.2.2 Data Analysis	101
6.3 Results	102
6.4 Theoretical model	107
6.5 Discussion	110
6.6 Conclusions and Outlook	112
7 Time-resolved high-harmonic spectroscopy on NO₂	113
7.1 Introduction	115
7.2 Methods	115
7.2.1 Experimental details	115
7.2.2 Data analysis	116
7.3 Results and Discussion	117
7.3.1 Static Spectrum	117
7.3.2 Femtosecond Dynamics	117
7.3.3 Picosecond Dynamics	120
7.4 Conclusion	122
8 Time-resolved high-harmonic spectroscopy on 1,3-cyclohexadiene	123
8.1 Introduction	125
8.2 Methods	127
8.2.1 Experimental	127
8.2.2 Data Analysis	128
8.2.3 Results	128
8.3 Discussion	133
8.4 Conclusion	133

9 Conclusions and Outlook	135
